DatingScams - The global online database of marriage and dating scammers. User profiles on our website are written by appeals over a thousand people who have been defrauded for hundreds and sometimes thousands of dollars by Internet contacts they thought were their friends or loved ones on dating websites or other. A romance scam, also known as an online dating scam, is when a person is tricked into believing they're in a romantic relationship with someone they met online. In fact, their other half is a cybercriminal using a fake identity to gain enough of their victim's trust to ask or blackmail them for money. Stop-Scammers.com is the place to find the most up-to-date information on female scammers anywhere in the world. As the Internet has grown in popularity and scope, so too have the ways in which thieves and other conmen can use it to relieve you of your money. Scammers often join dating websites, social media, and other dating apps, and pretend to be someone who is interested in their prospective victim. They act on emotional triggers to get these victims to provide personal details, gifts, and even money. Browse part 1 of female dating scammers online.
