THE SEA– PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

Under these generic students and teachers have carried out documentary activities to inform themselves about the past, the present and the future of the seas near which they live. They selected the most relevant information they inserted into power point materials and made them known at the level of the class, school or partnership, at a symposium that was an opportunity for participants from all partner schools to make a real exchange of information.

Students have participated in an interactive contest on the institutions and values of the European Union. The opportunity offered to young people has been highlighted through the grant programs it provides for their training and development. At the same time, the main aspects of the Erasmus+ project were reviewed in our school and diplomas were awarded to those who stood out with their participation in its activities.
